

Abstract

A bulk bag for flowable goods characterized in that the discharge means for the bag is held securely for transport and handling by means of pairs of interlocking first and second loops disposed on the discharge means and bag side, respectively, the second loops being 5 capable of being remotely opened by release of a releasable attachment of a first portion of the second loop to a second portion of such loop, and further wherein a strap is provided having a first, upper end securely attached to the bag side above each of said second loops and a second, lower end which is releasably secured to each second loop.